New Center City casino proposals lead the way

Early lead. North Broad Street and Market East proposals were highlighted at yesterday's gaming board meeting.

The Nutter administration has a bad poker face.

During a hearing yesterday before the state Gaming Control Board, city officials offered opinions on all six proposals submitted for the open casino license.

And two proposals — The Provence at the old Inquirer building at North Broad and Callowhill streets and Market8 at Eighth and Market streets — presented the most lucrative options, officials said.

The six potential developers include Bart Blatstein's Provence and Ken Goldenberg's Market8 in Center City; Steve Wynn's Wynn Philadelphia in Fishtown; and Joseph Procacci's Casino Revolution, Penn National Gaming's Hollywood Casino and Greenwood Racing and Cordish Co.'s Live! Hotel & Casino, all within the South Philly sports complex.

Deputy Mayor Alan Greenberger said while both the Market8 and Provence projects could transform the city, "Market8 would have the most immediate impact, while the Provence is a significant part of a longer term revitalization of North Broad Street."

Those projects, he said, also had an advantage in regards to further mixed-use development there.

The Provence, which would bring mostly slots and table games, would generate the most gaming-tax revenue — up to $14 million — according to AKRF consultant group.

Greenberger said the Wynn Philadelphia proposal was a "little harder to get your arms around," adding its close proximity to Sugar House raises concerns.

Keith Rowan, AKRF technical director, said the three South Philly projects are intriguing because of the proximity to the sports stadiums, but questions remain whether traffic would be an issue.

The developers will appear before the board at the end of January.

The board will most likely award the casino license in early 2014.

"In general, our analysis shows that the two Center City proposals, Market8 and the Provence, have the greatest potential for additional economic benefit associated with the awarding of the gaming license due to their location in key sections of the downtown."

'No casino, no matter where'

A group of about 50 protesters were ejected from the gaming board meeting about 20 minutes after it began.

A female protestor ignited anti-casino cries when she interrupted Greenberger as he presented his suggestions to the gaming board.

After she was ejected, the group chanted in unison for five minutes: "No casino, no matter where." The rest of the group was ejected soon after.

Manhunt. Police search for three West Philly home invaders

Police are searching for three men they say broke into a West Philadelphia home, tied up several people and stole electronics and other personal items, including car keys and shoes, police said.

The burglary happened around 3:30 a.m. yesterday on the 200 block of South 50th Street, in an apartment building in the Walnut Hill neighborhood.

After entering the residence and tying up several residents, the suspects took several pairs of shoes and sneakers, cell phones and other electronic items as well as the keys to a Nissan Altima bearing Nevada license plates. They then took off in the car, too.

The suspects, who were armed and wore homemade masks, apparently entered the home through a basement window, according to officials.

Police said there are no suspects in custody at this time, but investigators are reviewing area surveillance videos.

The three males are estimated to be in their mid- to late 20s, police said. TOMMY ROWAN

Strawberry Mansion bus loop opens today

SEPTA. The structure at 33rd and Dauphin streets has been reconstructed.

The newly constructed bus loop at 33rd and Dauphin streets officially opens today and gives more than 2,000 daily bus riders the chance to transfer to other routes safely.

The $4 million project, funded by a federal grant, revitalized the existing structure in Strawberry Mansion that dates back to 1901 and was last used as a trolley loop.

"We no longer operate trolleys there," said Robert Lund, assistant general manager of engineering, maintenance and construction for SEPTA. "It was in a sorry condition, pretty run down."

The new loop / SEPTA

The facility was restored over the last year and features an operator restroom, storage facility and covered shelter, raised platforms, designated crosswalks and new lighting for riders.

"So, it's safer for our passengers," Lund said. "They know exactly where to walk, exactly where the buses are going."

The loop also boasts an environmentally friendly green roof and original materials like bricks were recycled and used for reconstruction.

SEPTA spokesman Andrew Busch said the loop serves 2,115 customers on a daily basis on bus routes 7, 32, 39, 54 and 61.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will take place this morning at 10 a.m. with officials from the city and federal governments and SEPTA.

Busted. Camden County police arrested a 17-year-old for allegedly possessing a cache of cocaine and heroin.

A Camden teen was arrested Sunday for allegedly possessing 257 bags of cocaine and heroin, according to a release issued yesterday by the Camden County Police Department.

Investigators said Officer Kyle Pesce was on a directed patrol when he shortly after 9:40 p.m. saw a 17-year-old engage in a drug transaction near the corner of Willard and Vine streets, in Camden.

Controller. State payday lending bill targets 1 in 4 homes

A bill being considered by the state Senate expanding payday loans would target one in four Philadelphia households, according to a report released yesterday by City Controller Alan Butkovitz.

Payday loans are short-term, unsecured, high-interest loans often issued under the agreement the borrower will pay it back on their next payday.

"Payday loans are a form of predatory lending that does not build credit in any way," Butkovitz said in a statement.

"They often quickly lead consumers into a downward spiral of rapidly mounting fees and interest. These loans are virtually designed to ensnare borrowers in a debt trap," he added.

The state Senate is mulling Senate Bill No. 975, which would remove certain consumer protections surrounding payday loans and create a tier-loan system in which borrowers could be subject to a 28 percent flat interest rate, a 5 percent application fee per loan and a 5 percent processing fee.

In Butkovitz's report, titled "Impact of Legalizing Payday Loans in Philadelphia," he found 133,173 under-banked households in Philadelphia — about 25 percent of the city's households — are being targeted under the legislation.

Butkovitz issued a copy of his report to all Pennsylvania lawmakers, along with a letter urging them to vote against any legislation expanding payday lending in the state. ALEX WIGGLESWORTH

Further findings

If payday lending were to be expanded, it is unlikely check-cashing institutions would obtain licenses to offer loans to low-income Philadelphians.

- Of the 144 licensed check-cashing establishments here, more than half are located in neighborhoods with poverty rates above 26 percent.

Obama urges UN to back tough actions for chemical weapons

President Barack Obama urged the United Nations yesterday to back tough consequences for Syria if it refuses to give up chemical weapons and urged Russia and Iran to drop their backing of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad.

Speaking to the U.N. General Assembly, an annual gathering of world leaders, Obama laid out U.S. priorities for the volatile Middle East and North Africa. He stressed that the United States wants diplomatic outcomes to festering disputes, but does not rule out the use of military force or direct action against extremist threats.

Obama stepped back from launching unilateral military action against Syria early this month, setting in motion a diplomatic effort that led to Russian assistance in persuading Syria to agree to give up its chemical weapons after a poison gas attack on Aug. 21 that U.S. officials say killed 1,429 people.

With Syria's promise not yet fulfilled, Obama's challenge at the United Nations was to persuade world leaders to join in applying pressure on Syria with a U.N. Security Council resolution that includes tough consequences should Assad not surrender his chemical weapons stockpiles in a verifiable way. REUTERS

Burger King offering lower-fat french fries

Low-cal. The chain is introducing a version of french fries that are lower in calories and fat.

Burger King Worldwide Inc., known for its Whopper hamburgers, is introducing lower-fat french fries, as consumer groups in the United States increase pressure on the food industry to offer healthier alternatives.

The hamburger chain said the fries contain 40 percent less fat and 30 percent fewer calories than those sold by McDonald's.

More than one-third of Americans are obese, and about 10 percent of the nation's healthcare bill is tied to obesity-related diseases, such as type 2 diabetes, heart disease and hypertension, according to the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

As a result, health and parents' groups are lobbying to try to bring about change in the U.S. food and beverage industries.

Last week, first lady Michelle Obama asked television and food company executives at a White House gathering to sell youngsters on healthy food with the pitch: "If anyone can make our kids eat their vegetables, it's all of you."

In 2011, the Federal Trade Commission failed to get food and beverage makers to agree to voluntary guidelines on marketing to children. Since then, there have been various initiatives by individual companies or business coalitions to reduce calories in their products or set a code of conduct on marketing. REUTERS

UN. Reforms urged to make climate reports shorter, more focused

Climate experts on a U.N. panel should focus on short reports on specialist subjects, such as extreme weather, in a shift from sweeping overviews of the kind being prepared this week in Stockholm, many scientists say.

The big studies about global warming, produced every six or seven years by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, are authoritative — but also time-consuming and sometimes quickly outdated.

"A blockbuster every six years is no longer really helpful," said professor Myles Allen of Oxford University and among the authors who contributed to an IPCC summary of the findings that is due for presentation in Stockholm on Friday. REUTERS

Do Not Postpone Treatment

Varicose veins can start out as a seemingly small problem, but left untreated, can become much more serious. Complications of varicose veins may include ulcers. These may form on the skin near the affected veins, particularly near the ankles.

They are caused by fluid build-up in the dysfunctional veins and can be extremely painful.

Dysfunctional veins can also increase the risk of blood clots. Patients may experience a swelling in the leg, which may indicate a blood clot. Left untreated, these clots can travel through the bloodstream and lodge near the heart or lungs, causing potentially life-threatening health problems.

Facebook, other banned sites to open in China free-trade zone

The FTZ zone will be formally launched on Sept. 29, the Securities Times reported earlier this month. / GETTY IMAGES

Social network. For Facebook, China represents an important new market for growth.

Facebook, Twitter and other websites deemed sensitive and blocked by the Chinese government will be accessible in a planned free-trade zone in Shanghai, the South China Morning Post reported yesterday.

Citing unidentified government sources, the newspaper also said authorities would welcome bids from foreign telecom firms for licences to provide Internet services in the zone.

China's ruling Communist Party aggressively censors the Internet, routinely deleting online postings and blocking access to websites it deems inappropriate or politically sensitive.

Facebook and Twitter were blocked by Beijing in mid-2009 following deadly riots in the western province of Xinjiang that authorities say were abetted by the social networking sites.

The New York Times has been blocked since reporting last year that the family of then-Premier Wen Jiabao had amassed a huge fortune.

The recently approved Shanghai FTZ is slated to be a test bed for convertibility of China's yuan currency and further liberalization of interest rates, as well as reforms of foreign direct investment and taxation, the State Council, or cabinet, has said.

The idea of unblocking websites in the FTZ was to make foreigners "feel like at home," the South China Morning Post quoted a government source as saying. REUTERS

Kenya says mall militants 'defeated,' five dead, 11 held

Kenyan soldiers clear the top floor balcony and interior of the Westgate mall yesterday. / GETTY IMAGES

The attack. It's the worst such incident in Kenya since al-Qaida bombed the U.S. Embassy in '98.

Kenya's president said yesterday that his forces had "defeated" Islamists from Somalia's al Shabaab, had shot five of them dead and detained 11 others suspected of killing 67 people after storming a Nairobi shopping mall.

It remained unclear after Uhuru Kenyatta addressed the nation on television whether the four-day security operation at the upmarket Westgate center was completely over, or whether any militants were still at large or hostages unaccounted for.

"We have ashamed and defeated our attackers," Kenyatta said, adding that bodies were still trapped under rubble following the collapse of part of the building late in the operation.

Sixty-one civilians and six security personnel had been confirmed killed in the four days of bloodshed, Kenyatta said. REUTERS

Somali prime minister calls for aid to combat al Shabaab

Somalia's prime minister appealed yesterday for international support to combat al Shabaab militants but said a military solution to their insurgency alone was not enough.

Addressing the U.N. Human Rights Council in Geneva, Abdi Farah Shirdon denounced what he called the "cowardly attack" by al Shabaab militants on a shopping mall in the Kenyan capital Nairobi and said those responsible must be held accountable.

He praised the 17,000-strong African peacekeeping force deployed in Somalia for improving security and fighting al Shabaab, who he said were now weakened.

NY group seeks middle

Murky center.
Appleseeds tries to straddle the divide between a country that is split on guns.

In a basement classroom of the Westside Rifle and Pistol range, near the Flatiron Building in New York City, students are being given a lesson in early American history. It has a lot to do with guns.

There are 14 students in the classroom, seven women and seven men. The students have paid less than the price of an average New York dinner to spend three hours together, to learn how to shoot a small caliber rifle and take a rose-tinted walk through the history of the founding of the United States.

This is Project Appleseed, created by the Revolutionary War Veterans Association, dedicated to spreading the art of rifle marksmanship and its place in American history. A mission the group describes on its website is a bulwark against "American ignorance and apathy." It speaks volumes about the Appleseed volunteers that the group doesn't descend into some thin-veiled, if well-armed, Tea Party propaganda machine.

For an hour, instructor Dan Boyle, K-Dan for short, walks the group through a fractured history of the American Revolutionary War.

The group discusses the Minutemen, and Paul Revere, as well as the Boston Massacre ("How do we know a British soldier fired the first shot? Because he missed!") The group talks about self-reliance and the evolution of guns and rifles over the past 200 years, and Dan explains the parts of a model .22 rifle that he holds in his hands.

One student, the wife of another attendee, explains that while she is terrified of guns, her husband wants to buy one and she wants to learn more before they make the purchase. She is exactly, Dan points out, the kind of person that Appleseeds is trying to reach.

What Appleseed members say they are about, beyond the history lesson and target practice, is "personal responsibility."

For Boyle, the choice of that responsibility lies with gun owners. It's how, rifle in hand, he can point to a box of zombie target posters in the basement and reduce the targets to nothing without betraying the ideals that brought him here to teach in the first place. The posters, he explained, are often used as stand-ins for "liberals" in a segment of extreme Second Amendment supporters.

"I find the whole 'zombie' thing in poor taste," Boyle said. "It impersonalizes the other side. It's absolutely threatening to people who don't agree with you, when these pro-Second Amendment guys who stand around talking about how 'Liberalism is a disease,' and then in the next breath talk about zombies. It's not difficult to make the connection. I mean, what are we talking about? We're talking about killing our neighbors. I find it embarrassing."

Project Appleseed, and organizations like it, represent the closest thing to a middle ground in the gun debate that there is in the country right now. It's a place where the debate can be stripped of its caustic rhetoric and returned to something approaching rational conversation as novices learn the pros and cons of gun ownership.

"Liberty taken to the extreme is not a good thing," Boyle said to the class, laying out what might be Project Appleseed's most important lesson of all. "We are not 'armed,' the Second amendment not withstanding, against our government with weapons. What we are armed with is information and the vote," he says, adding before he dismisses class, "If you ignore your rights, they'll go away."

Guns in our cities

Following the trail of our bloody streets

Boston, Philadelphia, New York City: Three different cities with a common problem. Gun violence has destroyed the lives of countless individuals on our streets and wrought devastation across our neighborhoods, searing itself into their fabric.

Today Metro continues our weeklong look at the impact gun violence has had on those cities in the aftermath of the massacre at the Washington, D.C., Navy Yard. THE EDITORS

Boston gun instructor calls for training

Matthew DeVito, president and lead instructor at Down Range Firearms Training in Woburn, Mass., finds it hard to get behind the commonwealth's recently proposed firearm restrictions, as he doesn't believe they will reduce gun violence, but rather needlessly limit people's right to legally bare arms.

"All [the laws] are doing is making it harder for legal, law-abiding citizens to purchase firearms — but nothing is done to cut down on crime and crack down on criminals that use them illegally," said DeVito, who travels the nation training law enforcement officers and civilians on proper firearm use.

Big changes

The number of changes to Massachusetts state gun law as part of "An Act to Combat Gun Violence," introduced by Dan Conley, Suffolk County District Attorney

One of the biggest problems with the proposed restrictions, he believes, is that they are based on fear and misinformation propagated by non-gun owners.

"It's unfortunate because it's an irrational fear that causes more restrictive gun laws. Most people are not doing any homework, but rather are doing things to appease people, and that's the real issue when you boil it down and look at facts and numbers," he said.

Rather than implementing new gun restrictions, DeVito believes a shift in attitude and an emphasis on firearm safety and education in Massachusetts is key to lowering instances of gun violence.

Massachusetts's organizations like Gun Owners Action League (GOAL) and Commonwealth Second Amendment (Comm2A) are working to turn things around, he said.

"We need to spread awareness in the community and practice gun safety. More youth and 'women on target' programs that encourage females, without the ego of males, on the shooting range are important," DeVito said. "Through education we let people know that it's a gun, not a toy, and that people need to use them properly and safely in all aspects of life."

A Girl & A Gun 'empowers' women shooters

Montgomery County's A Girl & A Gun women's shooting league tries to keep politics out of its activities.

But league director Adrienne Nicotera said the bigger picture is certainly on her mind.

"You have bad apples who spoil the bunch," the Abington pediatric nurse said.

A Girl & A Gun, a nationwide organization with roots in Texas, gives women a controlled environment to shoot in what Nicotera calls a "male-driven sport."

Adrienne Nicotera of a Girl & A Gun takes firing practice. / COURTESY OF ADRIENNE NICOTERA

Prior to her involvement with the group, Nicotera didn't even want to touch a gun — let alone have one in the house like her Army husband wanted. He convinced her to take a basic pistol course. Now, she owns her own guns and is an NRA-certified pistol instructor.

"It's just very empowering," Nicotera said. "I could have the worst day ever and go shooting and come out with a smile on my face."

She's admitted a few of the women in her suburban Philadelphia league weren't too pleased with Starbucks CEO Howard Schultz's recent request that customers no longer bring guns into his stores. But Nicotera said that's his right.

"I can understand that with everything that's been going on lately," she said. "It makes people uncomfortable and that's all right."

Nicotera said better background checks should be in place, but she doesn't want it too difficult to get a gun.

"The harder they make it for an honest person to get a gun," she explains, "it's just going to make it even harder for us to defend ourselves. No matter what, there are always going to be illegal gun sales, and it just makes it difficult for anybody who is responsible and uses guns in a controlled environment. The bad guys will always find a way to get a gun. I don't know how they can stop it."

For the time being, Nicotera is just trying to hone her own controlled-environment shooting skills to maybe even start competing.

"I feel accomplished. I feel like I can do this," she said. "If you would have told me a year ago that I would be where I am today, I would say no way." CHRISTINA PACIOLLA

Pharrell Williams isn't afraid to go mainstream

Don't give Pharrell Williams any grief for collaborating with mainstream hit-makers.

"People have told me. 'Why are you working with 'Nsync?' Look at who Justin Timberlake is now. They told me, 'Don't work with Britney Spears.' She had a record being played on black radio. So I don't care about what people think. I care about what I can do, and what I can actually produce," Pharrell told Metro at the new nightlife planner app YPlan's release party last week at Lower East Side hot spot FINALE.

He'll even take on One Direction. When we asked him about the rumors that are swirling around their possible collaboration, he seems to echo the same feelings for the group as their tween fan base. "I have met them and I think they are incredibly talented. Would I work with them? Absolutely," he said. "If that happens, it would be super awesome — but if it doesn't, I really respect them and Simon [Cowell] knows what he's doing, man. And I tell you what. Harry Styles is super talented and so is Liam."

Kanye is bigger than Michael Jackson?

Kanye West is kind of a big deal, at least according to Kanye West, who refers to himself as "the No. 1 rock star on the planet" in an interview with BBC Radio 1. "I've got to a point that Michael Jackson did not break down. I have reached the glass ceiling, as a creative person, as a celebrity. … And I've been at it for 10 years," he says. "I look around and I say, 'Wait a minute. There's no one around here that looks like me. And if they are, they're quiet as f—.'"

Nick Carter opens up about Paris Hilton, new reality TV show plans

Nick Carter wasn't shy about naming names in his new memoir, "Facing the Music and Living to Talk About It." In the book, excerpted in In Touch last week, the Backstreet Boy writes that his ex-girlfriend Paris Hilton "was the worst person in the world for me to hook up with." And as Carter tells us, there's a reason he wanted to get everything out in the open. "Everyone knew about what was going on," the singer told us at an NYC Barnes and Noble on Monday. "We just weren't meant for each other at that time. It wasn't the right dynamic. It fed off of each other's faults and depression and misery."

NICK CARTER
GETTY IMAGES

But that's not to say he's pointing the finger at Hilton for his former substance abuse issues. "I wasn't blaming anyone, even her, for the way I was. Ultimately I had to assume the responsibility."

Things are now on the up for Carter. He's engaged to fitness pro Lauren Kitt, and the two are working on a reality show about their journey to the altar. "VH1 is really interested," he told us.

Talking points

Cyrus can 'dance a lot better'

Miley Cyrus has some good news for folks who weren't fans of her MTV Video Music Awards performance earlier this month: You won't see that again. "Now people expect me to come out and twerk with my tongue out all the time. I'll probably never do that s— again," she tells Rolling Stone. And as for criticism over the actual performance? "I wasn't trying to be sexy," she says. "If I was trying to be sexy, I could have been sexy."

What Alba wishes about her body

Not that Jessica Alba is saying she has a bad body now, but she wishes she'd taken advantage of it before she became a mother of two. "I was a lot more critical of my body when it was probably pretty awesome," she tells Health magazine. "It's like, why did I not ever wear jean shorts? That's so crazy!"

Harris goes on a hosting hiatus

Frequent awards show host Neil Patrick Harris may be looking to make that a little less frequent after this weekend's Emmys. "Emceeing the Emmys was fun, but I'm sure glad it's over," he posted to Twitter. "Looking forward to not hosting anything for a long time."

Blood, guts and showtunes

Cult classic. "Evil Dead: The Musical" is like a Sea World show gone horribly, horribly wrong.

Blood, gore, demons, more blood, chain saws, books of the dead, haunted woods and just an unbelievable amount of blood — do you feel a song coming on? Well, that was Christopher Bond's reaction to the cult favorite "Evil Dead" movie trilogy, particularly its gore and slapstick-heavy second entry.

"In 'Evil Dead 2', the blood and gore was so over-the-top that it was comedic," Bond says. "So I thought it would really translate to the stage. If you were at a show with buckets of blood all over the place in all these different colors, it would just be hilarious."

The Toronto-based theater director was on the lookout for a piece of material that would make a fun, audience-interactive performance akin to "The Rocky Horror Show" when he first sat down to watch "Evil Dead 2" more than a decade ago. "Evil Dead: The Musical" will run for the next four weeks at the Prince.

"What I loved about 'Rocky Horror' is that it wasn't just a show, it was an experience," Bond says. "It was more like a party. So I thought, 'Wow, I wish I was a part of something like that.' So I started thinking about what would be a cool, cult, underground work that would translate to the stage. I saw 'Evil Dead 2' and loved how kooky all the Three Stooges silliness was."

Working with playwright George Reinblatt, Bond decided to "squish together" elements of all three "Evil Dead" films, including the more horrific original film and the medieval-set "Army of Darkness." And "squish" is the appropriate word — like a Sea World dolphin show gone horribly wrong, the first several rows of the theater are designated the "Splatter Zone."

The creators of the "Evil Dead" films have been supportive of the Canadian team's efforts. Star Bruce Campbell encouraged them in the early going, directing them to the appropriate contacts to secure theatrical rights. And director Sam Raimi has given his endorsement to the show during its decade-long existence. "I think he saw a little bit of himself in us," Bond says of Raimi. "When he made 'Evil Dead,' he was fresh out of university and trying to make something special, and that was us 10 years ago."

Back

It may seem hard to believe, but "Enough Said" star Julia Louis-Dreyfus hasn't been on movie screens in 16 years. The "Veep" lead's last film role was in 1997's "Deconstructing Harry" for Woody Allen, with a pair of voice parts in between in 1998's "A Bug's Life" and this year's "Planes." But she swears she has nothing against movies. It's just that TV was providing plenty of work for her.

"Having these various series is a time-consuming thing," she explains. "I've managed my whole career — until actually at this moment — to work at home in Los Angeles. And I have two kids, both

But thanks to cable — Louis-Dreyfus' Emmy-winning turn on HBO's "Veep" is returning for a third season — she's found a much more manageable schedule.

"With 'Veep,' I'm doing 10 episodes a year and it has opened things up for me," she says. "And also this film was shot in Los Angeles, which was fabulous."

The film also gives her a chance to collaborate with writer-director Nicole Holofcener, a filmmaker known for complex and engaging female characters.

Eve, Louis-Dreyfus' single mom massage therapist who starts dating a client's ex-husband, is no different.

"This is a women who's been hijacked emotionally without almost even knowing it — by herself," Louis-Dreyfus explains. "It really just spoke to me — not that I have ever done anything that deceitful in my life, but I understand why she did it. It does intrigue me, someone who means so well doing something so terrible."

That setup paves the way for a brand of cringe humor in which Louis-Dreyfus insists she revels.

"It was actually excruciating to do. I love scenes like that," she says. "I love awkward, wince-y, shame-filled moments of entertainment. I love to live there for as long as possible."

Remembering

Memories of Gandolfini

"Enough Said" marks the last film appearance of James Gandolfini, who died of a heart attack during a trip to Italy in June. Co-star Louis-Dreyfus insists the romantic comedy is a perfect tribute to both the actor and the man. "First of all, he's an outstanding actor," she says. "Secondly, James is a gentle giant. This part that he plays of Albert, as this kind and thoughtful and earnest and self-effacing fellow, is very, very close to who James Gandolfini was — much more so than Tony Soprano. He was no mafia boss, James Gandolfini. He was a dear, dear man."

DANIEL BRUHL

The actor has big supporting roles in two major films this season, including "Rush."

STEALING SCENES

Daniel Bruhl is having a busy year. He quite handily steals two major premieres from high-profile co-stars in "The Fifth Estate" and "Rush." Both films appear to be about someone else — WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange (Benedict Cumberbatch) and late Formula 1 driver James Hunt (Chris Hemsworth) — but are really about Bruhl's characters: Assange fan-turned-partner Daniel Domscheit-Berg and disfigured racing legend Niki Lauda. Bruhl tells us more.

The two films have a lot in common: "There are some parallels between the films, because I'm playing two real characters," Bruhl explains. "It's also interesting, the structure of the movies, because you don't have a hero and a villain at the end, but you have empathy for both of them. ... And then, of course, my roots help me because both of these characters are quite focused and German in a way: correct and reasonable and so on."

One thing led to the other: "It's partly luck," he says. "I have to say that Ron [Howard] helped me a lot and supported me after making 'Rush' and helped me get into the next movie."

He's part of a bigger trend: "In general, this change started a couple of years ago that we Germans or European actors get the real chance to play these great parts in American movies. This is an interesting change, and I hope it's going to go on."

Playing real, living people can be an odd experience: "It was very strange to see 'Rush' in London the other day with [Lauda]," he says. "I mean, I watched him watching the movie. I got goose bumps sometimes."

Housing market

US home prices are up, but confidence is a concern

U.S. home prices slowed their rate of gains in July and a dip in consumer confidence this month underscored the potential for a sluggish economy to dent a housing market recovery.

The S&P/Case Shiller composite index of 20 metropolitan areas rose 0.6 percent, a little slower than the 0.9 percent increase logged in June.

In addition, data from the U.S. Federal Housing Finance Agency showed U.S. home prices rose 1 percent in July from June.

Since May, homebuyers have been hit with rising interest rates on speculation the U.S. Federal Reserve could soon pull back on crisis-era stimulus measures, slowing house price gains.

Price gains could keep slowing as rates keep moving higher.

"Further rate increases are going to have an effect. That's what's on people's minds now," said economics professor Robert Shiller. REUTERS

Moves

Moves tracks your daily movements while killing your battery.

America was once a paranoid nation, one that (wrongly) thought there was a cartoonishly massive conspiracy around the assassination of President Kennedy and (rightly) pounced on Richard Nixon for underhanded doings. But when offered the chance to surrender all information about themselves to "the man," humanity hungrily signed up. If there's an upside to having a phone that can track one's every moment (unless on a New York City subway), it's this: You can account for your daily movements and feel terrible about how little you're, well, moving.

On one hand, the app Moves serves as a handy pedometer. It tracks your every step, whether you're walking, running or riding a bike. Insert your weight and height and you can get an estimate of how many calories you've burned. If you're chained to a desk all day, you can track, with abject horror, how little you get up and walk around. If you're a fitness nerd, you can track, with precision (or horror) how much you're moving.

The app comes with a map, which is where it gets really interesting. The map shows your daily movements as lines that are your footprints. If seeing exactly how much you move doesn't scare you into being more active, than little else will. The only drawback: This app is a battery-drainer like no other — like Facebook, Google Maps and Twitter times 10. Then again, you might find becoming obsessed with your daily actions is worth an occasionally spent phone.

If I Die

Price: $.99

Speaking of living and health, remember this: You are going to die. You will cease to exist one day, because of old age or a terrifying disease or because you weren't paying attention for half a second and ended up eaten by a bear. How you're remembered post-mortem isn't ultimately important: As Woody Allen once said, "I don't want to achieve immortality through my work; I want to achieve it through not dying." But if you must be remembered, make it good. If I Die is a tongue-in-cheek — but toweringly grim — way to preserve what you are. You can record yourself on audio or video, leave notes, and as you await being enraptured by the great unknown, you can make a bucket list. You may go at any second, so you might as well be prepared.

Leave a series of mementos for your loved ones with If I Die.

Microsoft reveals the Surface Pro 2

Microsoft unveiled the Surface Pro 2 at its event on Monday, the successor to its first-generation tablet that won kudos for its design approach as well as its bold attempt to dislodge the iPad's hold on the market.

While the Surface Pro didn't fare as well as Microsoft might have hoped, the updated version offered several new features that may spark new interest in the company's tablet efforts.

From the outset it was clear that Microsoft listened to user complaints about battery life, as the Surface Pro 2 reportedly offers an amazing 75 percent improvement. The battery upgrade makes the Surface Pro 2 better suited for heavy usage throughout the day rather than in battery-conscious spurts. MASHABLE

FALL PRODUCE WITH HIDDEN HEALING POWERS

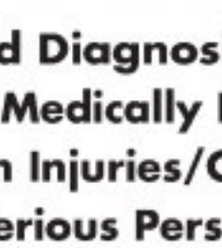
Summer has wrapped up and fall is officially here! Along with watching the leaves change color and shopping for fun sweaters, it's also the perfect time to embrace roasted root vegetables, hearty salads and warm, fruit-laden desserts that incorporate the nutritious bounty of the season. These five late-harvest foods will inspire you to create comforting autumn fare.

Figs

A culinary delicacy of biblical proportions, figs have been revered by ancient civilizations for centuries. These sweet gems are one of the best fruit sources of polyphenols, antioxidants that may help prevent LDL, or "bad cholesterol," from clogging up arteries. For a classic Mediterranean breakfast, top a bowl of tangy plain nonfat Greek yogurt with sliced fresh figs. Or, use dried figs to add natural sweetness to homemade protein bars — the perfect treat for fall hikes.

Brussels sprouts

Although tiny, these little cabbages are chock-full of potent compounds that may prevent DNA damage on the cellular level, making them super cancer-fighters. Here's an easy recipe to try: Thinly slice Brussels sprouts into a slaw, and saute with olive oil, garlic and balsamic vinegar. Go from side dish to entree by combining the sauteed sprouts with cooked quinoa and dried cranberries.



Mustard greens

If you already love spinach and kale, it's time to introduce your kitchen to this under-the-radar leafy green. The peppery leaves are rich in sulforaphane, an antioxidant enzyme booster that enhances the effects of vitamins C, E and A, which may in turn help protect your skin from aging and environmental damage. Saute mustard greens with sesame oil, garlic, salt and pepper and top with toasted sliced almonds for a flavorful dinner side. Or, add the chopped greens to pasta dishes to transform an everyday entree into an age-defying meal.

Married cancer patients fare better

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: 735,000 cancer patients
Results: Married cancer patients might be less likely to have their cancer metastasize than unmarried cancer patients, according to a Harvard study. Researchers also noted that married cancer patients are less likely to die from cancer than unmarried patients. Male cancer patients benefited more from marriage than female ones did.
Significance: The study supported the significant impact that being in a caring relationship and having social support can have on a patient's chances of surviving cancer.

Could many cardiac deaths be prevented?

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: 2,093 patients who died from sudden cardiac arrest
Results: The majority of patients who died of sudden cardiac arrest qualified to receive potentially lifesaving treatment that was not administered, according to Cedars-Sinai. Researchers found that only 20 percent of patients who died from sudden cardiac arrest were examined to see if they met the criteria to receive an implantable cardiac defibrillator.
Significance: Sudden cardiac arrest accounts for half of all deaths caused by heart disease. Says Dr. Sumeet Chugh, associate director of the Cedars-Sinai Heart Institute: "We need to take another look at the guidelines."

Anxious? A gene may be the cause. / MONKEY BUSINESS

New clues into anxiety

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Mice
Results: A small variant in a brain gene found in 20 percent of the population contributes to a greater risk for anxiety, depression and memory loss, according to a report in Nature Communications. The research team at Weill Cornell Medical College discovered that the alteration appears to cause neurons from the hippocampus (an important region for memory and emotion) to shrink, reducing connectivity between brain cells.
Significance: This helps explain why neuropsychiatric disorders run in families. "We will work to develop therapeutic strategies to prevent the neuronal disconnection induced by the gene alteration," says study author Dr. Agustin Anastasia. LINDA CLARKE

Nutrition. Snap up these fruits and veggies before the weather turns.

Some summer produce is still in season. GETTY IMAGES, PURESTOCK

September brings with it pumpkin spiced lattes, fall foliage and a bit of a nip in the air, but it's not quite time to wave goodbye to the produce we've been relishing all summer.

"We're right at the end of summer harvest, so some of those fruits and vegetables that we've enjoyed are still in season," says Libby Mills, MS, RDN, LDN, a Philadelphia-based spokesperson for the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics. "We've got through the end of September to enjoy tomatoes, summer squash, basil, arugula, green beans and cantaloupe. Stock up and enjoy them."

And though time is of the essence for those items, the change in season means we're in the center of growing season for other fruits and vegetables, like eggplant, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower and endive.

Of course, autumn is synonymous with apples, and while Mills is all for adding them to your fall diet, just be sure to give them — and all other produce you stock up on this season — a good wash.

"It's absolutely very important to wash all your produce, no matter what," Mills says. "We sometimes think, 'Oh, it's from a farmers market, it's cleaner' — maybe, maybe not." Indeed, your farmer might be spraying the produce with pesticides, and it's easy to forget that produce comes into contact with dirt and animals.

But don't feel like you have to buy one of those fancy vegetable washes to get your goods clean: "You really don't have to go that far," Mills says. "You can use just a light, soapy solution. Make sure you rinse it really well." For a natural wash, she recommends 3 tablespoons of apple cider vinegar in a gallon of water.

Organic

Know thy farmer

A major benefit of visiting farmers markets is that "you get to talk with the producer and ask them specifically how that product is grown," Mills says. Then, you can weigh that information against your own values. Some sample questions to ask: Do they use pesticides? How often? Do they mix organic and inorganic farming methods? If the answer to that last question is yes, don't fret. Some produce — like anything with a peel and anything not grown in the ground — is OK inorganic, because pesticides are less able to seep through. And don't be put off if you don't see an organic label at your farmer's stand — that label costs a pretty penny for a small farmer. Your produce might still "be in as natural a state as it can be," Mills says.

Success is measured best by joy

Re: 'A look back at Nickelodeon's "golden age"' (Metro, Sept. 24) I liked your article in Tuesday's paper on Nickelodeon. You talk about how Kenan and Kel no longer speak. At the end, you said Kenan is on "SNL" and Kel becomes a gospel singer. You perceived just because one is an actor, that he is more successful. In today's world that is what people think and it is all about money — that is NOT how true success is measured. Most of the actors that have been on "SNL," although very funny, have not really led successful lives. They end up making bad movies or die in some lonely hotel room from a drug overdose. But being a gospel singer is true success. There may not be the money in it, but I guarantee you he is a very happy person singing God's word and helping people to love Christ.

MICHAEL MCCORMICK, VIA EMAIL

Address the real causes of violence

Re: 'Guns in our cities' investigative series (Metro, week of Sept. 23) Let's talk about some things that are often left out of the public safety conversation. Who are the killers? Young males who believe that violence is a good way to solve problems and the mentally impaired. How can we improve public safety? First, let's enforce and improve our laws and systems to keep guns out of the hands of young men and the mentally impaired. Second, let's stop the prescription of drugs that are known to have effects like suicide and violent behavior and are involved in most of our mass murders. Third, let's stop glorifying violence and educate our children.

Manning playing head games with the Eagles

NFL. The Broncos' quarterback is upset with the NFL as the Eagles get set to touch down in Denver.

Listening to Jon Gruden talk Monday night, the Eagles shouldn't even make the flight out to Denver. Peyton Manning is carving up defenses like a crazed serial killer.

After tossing three more touchdowns against Oakland, Manning set a new record for the first three weeks of a season. He's up to 12 touchdown tosses now, breaking Tom Brady's mark, and the Broncos are undefeated.

However, the schedule is set in stone. It can't be changed, and Chip Kelly's Eagles won't be scared when they touch down in the "House That Manning Rebuilt."

"When do we go play?" Kelly said. "We got to play in a parking lot? We'll go play in a parking lot. We don't care."

Of course, the coach was quick to add that Manning will go down in NFL history as one of the best to ever line up under center. The mood in the locker room echoed those thoughts. Yes, Manning is ridiculously, ridiculously talented … yet the game is played between the lines. They'll trust their preparation and rely on their technique on Sunday — and they won't be afraid to blitz him.

"Why not blitz him? What, you gonna play scared?" cornerback Cary Williams wondered aloud. "He's the man. He's a great player, but you have to do what you've been doing and just get a little better, play with better technique and tackle to be successful in this game."

Williams is no stranger to going head-to-head with "the man." His Ravens advanced past Denver on their way to the Super Bowl last season. Corey Graham picked Manning off twice in a divisional playoff matchup, Williams deflected one pass and Baltimore's defense kept the pressure on all night. Williams is hoping for a similar result.

"I'm a competitor. If you don't want to play the best, you shouldn't be here," Williams said. "If you want to be the best, you have to play the best and you have to beat them. We were able to do that last year [in Baltimore], and hopefully we can duplicate that here. I know it's going to be a great matchup … it's the opportunity of a lifetime."

MICHAEL GREGER
michael.greger@metro.us

He said what?

Peyton Manning had a few choice words for the NFL following Denver's 37-21 dismantling of the Raiders on Monday Night Football.

- "It's nice of the NFL to give Philly 12 days [of rest] and give us six," Manning told reporters. "So we've got to handle that. We've still got some guys injured."
- When informed of those comments, Eagles cornerback Cary Williams smiled and laughed. "That's what Peyton said? That's a mind game. I appreciate it, Peyton," he said.

Manning has already thrown 12 TDs this season. / GETTY IMAGES

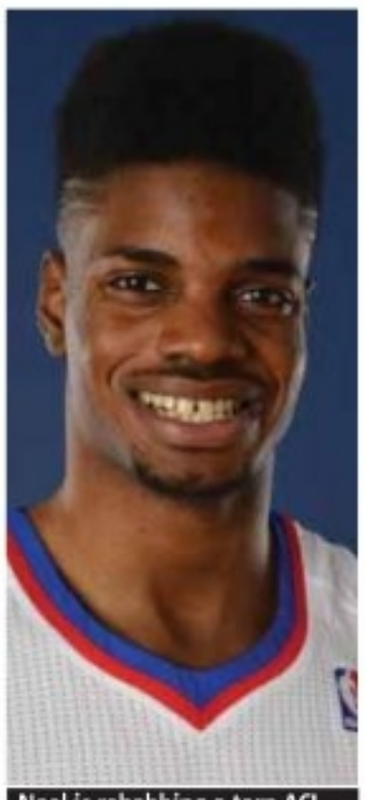
76ers sign top two draft picks prior to camp

NBA. Nerlens Noel and Michael Carter-Williams ink contracts before heading to camp at Saint Joseph's.

The Sixers are mere days away from the start of training camp. The squad takes over Hagan Arena on the campus of Saint Joseph's University this Saturday.

Before they get there, they wanted to take care of some business. The Sixers signed their two first-round draft picks, Nerlens Noel (sixth overall) and Michael Carter-Williams (11th) yesterday. Terms were not disclosed.



Noel is rehabbing a torn ACL.
GETTY IMAGES

Noel is rehabbing from ACL surgery and isn't expected back before December. The Sixers are certainly not going to rush the 19-year-old center back too soon. He averaged 11 points and 10 rebounds last year at Kentucky.

Meanwhile, Carter-Williams has a shot to earn a starting job. The 6-foot-6 guard averaged 14 points and seven assists per game for the Sixers in the Orlando Pro Summer League.

Both players will address reporters at Friday's media day.

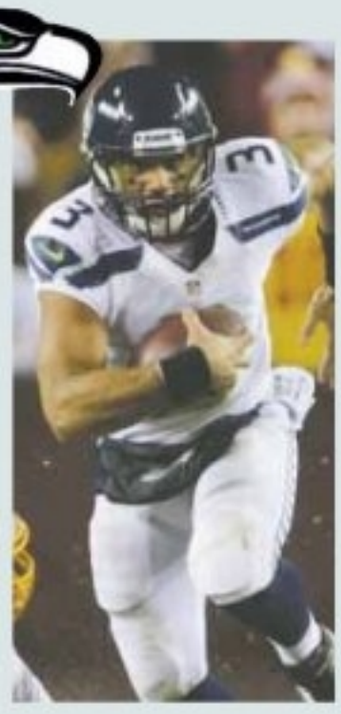
FINANCING DONE RIGHT

NFL power rankings | by Mike Greger

No. 1

Seahawks (3-0)



Not only did they cover that ridiculous 19.5-point spread, they looked good doing it. Seattle put up 479 total yards — 323 through the air — in a 45-17 old-school beatdown of hopeless Jacksonville. They could be in for a real letdown this week, on the road in Houston — but we're not betting against them. Beast team in football, right Marshawn Lynch?

No. 2

Broncos (3-0)

Peyton Manning is still wiping Jon Gruden's slobber off his orange uniform. Has Peyton ever had this many weapons?

No. 3

Saints (3-0)

Sean Payton gets an early vote for MVP. Seriously. No coach has ever won that award. He deserves it for bringing voodoo that he do back to the bayou.

No. 4

Bears (3-0)

We messed up. We had them ranked too low. Jay Cutler is initiating contact, and Bears are dominating both sides.

No. 5

Patriots (3-0)

It looks like Tom Brady is getting young guys to buy in amid reports he reached out to Deion Branch. We'll know for sure if they beat Atlanta.

No. 6

Bengals (2-1)

Going toe-to-toe with the Packers is no small feat. Marvin Lewis celebrated his 55th birthday in style and moves up as reward.

No. 7

49ers (1-2)

Jim Harbaugh's group is in free fall. Is a blueprint for stopping Colin Kaepernick out there? He must adjust to be considered elite.

No. 8

Ravens (2-1)

They should get T-Pain to be the mascot because all they do is win. Even with injuries — and a "party bus" — they roll along.

No. 9

Texans (2-1)

What happened to the D? Ranked No. 2 in yards allowed, Houston has just eight sacks and one interception. Pressure and picks win games here.

No. 10

Packers (1-2)

One fumble return away. More disturbing, a sideline spat between coach Mike McCarthy and QB Aaron Rodgers.

No. 11

Chiefs (3-0)

Three games and no turnovers. That, and Justin Houston is making a case for Defensive Player of the Year.

No. 12

Dolphins (3-0)

Miami won't wow you with stats, not appearing in the Top 10 in key categories. They do little things well. Efficient!

No. 13

Falcons (1-2)

This preseason favorite is plagued by high-profile injuries. Even so, the O is potent enough for ATL to make a lot of noise and get this fixed.

No. 14

Colts (2-1)

We can't say enough about Indy's front office for the way it rebuilt this team. The Colts put the entire NFL on notice.

No. 15

Cowboys (2-1)

The best of a bad NFC East may soon come back to reality. Still, there's no denying an offense at 27.7 points a game.

No. 16

Lions (2-1)

Wow, can we coin "DUIP" — driving under influence of pizza — after Nate Burleson crashed his car adjusting a box of pie?

No. 17

Titans (2-1)

The old formula rings true: run the ball and play defense — and hopefully Jake Locker can make a play down the stretch. See: Titans last week.

No. 18

Rams (1-2)

St. Louis won't win a lot with Sam Bradford throwing the ball 48 times. He's already chucked it 141 times.

No. 19

Chargers (1-2)

New coach Mike McCoy is a sharp offensive mind. The Bolts' two losses have come by a combined six points. He'll figure it out.

No. 20

Eagles (1-2)

The Eagles' O-line looked as gassed as Donovan McNabb after that weird speech. Three games in 11 days will tire a fast team.

No. 21

Panthers (1-2)

We understand you are what your record says you are, but Carolina could easily be 3-0 right now. Cam Newton is good. This defense might be better.

Ravens

Jones injured by stripper

Ravens coach John Harbaugh confirmed a TMZ report Jacoby Jones was involved in a fight on a party bus.

The receiver was struck over the head with a champagne bottle by a stripper early Monday morning. Players were celebrating tackle Bryant McKinnie's birthday. METRO

Cowboys

Spencer likely out for year

Spencer may need to undergo microfracture surgery on his left knee. He has played just 34 snaps this season. METRO

According to police, the wide receiver was attempting to adjust a pizza box while he was driving. Drugs and alcohol were ruled out. METRO

Temple's Pierce taking it all in stride in NFL

Pierce broke off a 25-yard run and a touchdown in his first start. / GETTY IMAGES

Bernard Pierce may be flying on different wings and sporting different colors than when he tore it up at Temple. That doesn't mean he's left behind his buddies on North Broad Street.

In fact, following the Ravens' 30-9 win over Houston this past Sunday, the 22-year-old acknowledged he's keeping in touch with his former Owl teammates.

"I talk to them at least once a week," said Pierce, who ran for 65 yards on 24 carries and a touchdown in his first NFL start. "There's a lot of people still left I know. I've watched them on TV, but haven't had a chance to get down there and go to a game."

His alma mater is 0-3 under new coach Matt Rhule, who served as assistant offensive coordinator when Pierce was there. The running back rushed for 3,570 yards and scored 54 touchdowns for the Cherry and White.

"Matt's a good coach," said Pierce, who has 144 yards on 52 carries this season. "There's gonna be a lot of wins coming Temple's way soon."

Temple might want to start this weekend in Moscow, Idaho, where the Owls take on the Vandals. If not, they'll face an uphill climb next week, when they host Teddy Bridgewater and No. 5 Louisville.

Meanwhile, Pierce will have other things on his mind. Ravens starter Ray Rice isn't expected back for a couple of weeks, meaning the load falls on his 6-foot, 218-pound frame.

"Bernard battled the whole game," said Ravens coach John Harbaugh. "He made some big third-down conversions for us. Bernard's able to take the ball north-south against defenses and hold on to that football."

Pierce takes it all in stride.

"I'm getting a lot better," said Pierce. "This [first start] was just another game. I just tried to stay calm. The blocking was great, but it was still nice to take it into the end zone."
